THE LUNDINE COMMISSION REPORT

The most recent commission to address government efficiency issued its report in April, 2008 (the “Lundine Report”). The report includes both direct recommendations to consolidate entities and/or reduce costs, as well as recommendations for local governments to study areas where they might improve efficiency or lower costs depending upon the particular facts that a study would uncover. It thus recognizes that mandating change in all cases is inappropriate.

Specific recommendations are:

- Centralize assessing, tax collection, emergency dispatch, civil service commissions and vital records at the county level.
- Provide flexibility for counties to share jail facilities, co-manage jail populations, health directors, weights and measures.
- Expand local governments’ ability to share services
- Encourage justice court and IDA consolidations
- Allow renegotiation of collective bargaining contracts when consolidations occur.
- Require town-wide approval for a new village and reconsider small villages
- Ease procedures for consolidation, citizen petitions, and coterminous town-villages
- Require local consideration of county level management of fire protection
- Reconsider commissioner run special districts, end their compensation
- Allow local governments to make property tax sharing agreements
- Strengthen home rule by prohibiting the judicial doctrine of “implied preemption”
- Consider reclassifying some cities, towns and villages and the powers of each class
- Empower the Commissioner of Education to order school consolidations
- Set up school committees to explore shared services and consolidation
- Authorize regional collective bargaining contracts in school districts for new hires
- Facilitate consolidation of back office and regional high schools
- Hold all elections in November or May
- Reduce the number of elected offices (i.e., clerk, receiver of taxes, highway superintendent, etc.)
- Improve local financial data for better citizen review of government efficiency
- Make available grants and aid to pursue shared services and consolidations
- Increase aid to modernize assessing practices
- Encourage regional solutions, cooperative services and consolidation
- Require minimum employee contributions for health insurance
- Ease municipal cooperative health plan rules
- Consider a new pension tier for new employees
- Reform Wicks and other procurement laws
- Finally, maintain a long-term focus on local efficiency using existing state agencies that will support local initiatives, promote cost savings and follow through on the commission’s recommendations.

NEW YORK GOVERNMENT REORGANIZATION AND CITIZEN EMPOWERMENT ACT OF 2009

The “New York Government Reorganization and Citizen Empowerment Act” (the “2009 Reorganization Act”), proposed by the Attorney General, will become effective in March, 2010. It facilitates the consolidation of towns, villages or districts, including but not limited to special-improvement districts and library districts (“government entities”) the dissolutions of villages and certain districts, and grants counties additional powers to initiate dissolutions as well. The Act specifically excludes school districts, city districts or special-purpose districts created by counties under county law.

Several legislators and municipal organizations are studying it and proposing amendments, which may be considered next year. As local governments consider consolidations or sharing of services in the years ahead, it is also likely that various technical issues will arise that could best be resolved through statewide legislation.

The 2009 Act contains two sections: a new Article 17-A which sets forth procedures to consolidate or dissolve government entities by the local governing board or by citizens themselves by initiative; and an amendment to Section 33-a of the municipal home-rule law enabling counties to abolish “units of government,” something previously not allowed.

Consolidations can occur across county borders as long as at least one of the government entities, if a town or village, is contiguous to another and if together the entities would form a consolidated government entity of a kind or class that is authorized under state laws (i.e., town, village, certain districts). Consolidating districts do not have to be contiguous. Note: while the law does not preclude the formation of new towns from a consolidation of existing local government entities (villages, certain districts, towns), it is likely such an action would be decided in the court system.

Consolidations and dissolutions can be initiated by an approved joint resolution of the bodies of the government entities to be consolidated or dissolved, or by a citizen-initiated petition.

Under the 2009 Act, the dissolution of towns is not addressed, except to the extent that a county might dissolve a town under its new authority. It is likely that most dissolutions would involve villages and districts.

Governing Body- (Board) Initiated Consolidations

The joint resolution of the governing bodies must include a consolidation agreement that sets forth, among other items, the structure, rights, duties and obligations of the combined entity, the estimated cost savings from consolidation, a listing of each entity’s assets, liabilities and indebtedness and the fair value thereof, the terms of disposition of these assets, liabilities and indebtedness, the terms for the common administration and enforcement of local laws and ordinances during a transition period not to exceed two years (within two years the successor governing body must adopt new laws, ordinances, rules and regulations as necessary to redress conflicts and ambiguities that may arise among the then-existing laws, etc.), the effective date, the date of a public hearing, the publication of the joint consolidation agreement in a public place and on a website, and publication, in a newspaper of general circulation for four successive weeks, of a summary of the major provisions and direction to the public as to where the agreement itself may be examined.

The entities may hold one or more public hearings held no less than 35 days nor more than 90 days after commencement of the consolidation proceedings. After the hearings, the governing bodies may amend the agreement with any final agreement approved by the board within 180 days of the final hearing or they may decline to proceed any further.

If the consolidation involves a town or village (not a district), then contemporaneously with the final board approval of the consolidation agreement the bodies shall call for a public referendum to be held within 60-90 days. The bodies must obtain an affirmative vote in each municipality to be consolidated for the final agreement to be approved. If any entity does not approve the consolidation, the measure fails and may not be reinitiated for a period of four years.

Citizen-Initiated Petitions

Citizens may initiate consolidation by circulating petitions signed by registered voters of each of the local entities under consideration. The signed petitions must contain not less than 10% of the number of registered voters or 5,000 registered voters, whichever is less, in each local government entity to be consolidated provided, however, that where the entity to be consolidated contains 500 or fewer voters, the petition shall contain at least 20% of the number of registered voters.

Within ten days of receiving the petitions, the clerk must make a final determination regarding the sufficiency of the signatures on the petition. Once the clerk has certified that the petitions contain the necessary signatures, the governing bodies must pass a resolution calling for a referendum in each of the entities within 30 days thereafter. The referendum shall take place within 60-90 days of the governing bodies' resolutions.

The notice of the referendum must include the date, time and place of the vote and a summary of the contents of the resolution and petition for consolidation and any joint consolidation agreement, if any, the names of the government entities and a description of their territories and any other matters as necessary to provide for and give notice of the referendum.

The question on the referendum shall read: "Shall (insert type and name of government entity) be consolidated with (insert type and name of government entity)?" An affirmative vote in each government entity must occur for the referendum to pass. If any one of the entities does not reach a majority approval than the measure fails and may not be reinitiated for a period of four years.

If, however, an affirmative vote is reached, the governing bodies shall meet within 30 days of the certified vote and within 180 thereafter (i.e., within 210 days of the certified vote) and prepare and approve by resolution a consolidation plan containing the same information that is contained in the joint consolidation plan required to be prepared and reviewed by the public under a governing board-initiated consolidation but prior to a referendum.

Public hearings to review a consolidation plan under the citizen-initiated consolidation are held in effect after the vote to consolidate and within 35 -90 days after the governing bodies have approved a consolidation plan. The governing bodies may amend the plan following the public hearing but must approve a final version within 60 days of the final hearing.

The final plan may be overturned and fail to take effect if the registered voters of any of the government entities to be consolidated initiate another petition drive and, within the 45 day period after the final approval of the consolidation plan, file a petition with their clerk containing not less than 25% of the registered voters or 15,000 voters, whichever is less, seeking a revote, and the second referendum then fails to be approved. Only those entities that receive a petition for a revote hold a second referendum.

If a governing body or bodies fail to prepare and approve a citizen-initiated consolidation plan or are otherwise unable or unwilling to "accomplish and complete the consolidation" as described above within the time allotted, then any five petitioners may commence a special proceeding in State Supreme Court pursuant to Article 78 to compel compliance. Possible outcomes include mediation, an injunction to comply or appointment of a court hearing officer to hear and determine a consolidation plan for the entities.

The law then details ways in which the employees, assets, liabilities, debts, elected officials and local laws are to be treated in a combined entity.

Dissolutions

Dissolutions under 17-A are limited to villages and districts. Board-initiated dissolutions and citizen-initiated dissolutions proceed under substantially the same procedures and time schedules as described above. The difference is that, in case of a dissolution, a notice to the receiving government entity – most likely a town in the case of a village – is required.

County Powers

Section 33-a of the municipal home-rule law has been amended to grant counties the added authority to initiate “the abolition” of units of government (cities, towns, villages, districts or other units of government), including any departments, agencies or offices thereof, when the level and quality of all of the services they provide are transferred. The abolition of villages is subject to a mandatory referendum at a general or special election and must receive a triple majority. Voters within the cities must approve, voters outside the cities must be counted separately and approve, and voters within the villages (if involved) must separately approve. When villages are involved, the results of a mandatory referendum within all of the villages involved is considered as a unit in determining if there is an approval. The consolidation or dissolution of a town or district shall be conducted under the earlier terms of Article 17-a discussed above.
